

marsjupiter.com web design

Written by admin

marsjupiter.com previously known for software, are moving slowly into the area of web design and implementing shopping carts for small businesses. The process started by us being appalled at the awful and expensive web design service we saw done for our favourite homebrew shop Arkwrights. We resolved to fix this, and have since realised there is a crying need for people who will work ethically with small businesses which have minimal computer literacy.

As is required here, the companies that post adverts must provide references to forums they post on. I post under the id jema on rivercottage.
